

STATE REFORMS TO LIMIT THE USE OF

administrative segregation facility, which is projected to save the state $4.5 million in Fiscal Year 2012-13 and $13.6 million in Fiscal Year 2013-14.<sup>10</sup>

- Correctional leaders in Michigan reformed administrative segregation practices through incentive programs that reduced the length of stays in isolation, the number of prisoners subject to such segregation, and the number of incidents of violence and other misconduct. Reduction in segregation has produced better prisoner outcomes at less cost; segregation in Michigan costs nearly double what the state typically pays to incarcerate each prisoner.<sup>11</sup>
- In New Mexico prisoners, its effectiveness as a prison management tool, and its costs.<sup>12</sup> The Lieutenant Governor of Texas similarly commissioned a study on the use of administrative segregation in